

The Intelligencer.

Office 25 & 27 Fourth Street.
T. W. CAMPBELL
PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR.

THURSDAY, MARCH 28, 1878.

During the month of February eleven hundred emigrant tickets were sold for the West at the Harrisburg (Pa.) depot of the Pennsylvania Railroad, double the number sold in the corresponding month of last year. The emigrants were among the best of the State—well-to-do farmers, mechanics, wheelwrights, craftsmen of all kinds; and a large number of them had been tenants on farms, who had accumulated sufficient money to buy land in the West.

The Way Boys Get Hurt on Street Cars and Railroads.

WHEELING, MARCH 28th 1878.
Editors Intelligencer.
There have been several cases in our courts against the street railway, to recover damages for the killing or maiming of children. I believe there is a case in court now to recover damages from the above corporation, and in all these cases, it is just through the care and conduct of these children that they are killed or hurt.

Just to cite one instance, which came under the writer's observation, the other day, (which is one of many) a street car was coming up the street and a boy about eleven years old wanted to cross the street and he walked deliberately into the middle of the street car track, and stood there until the engine, which was moving slowly, had reached him. He was then run over and killed. Now that is only one case out of a hundred that occurs every week. Suppose that boy had been knocked down and hurt; the parents would have brought an action for damages, and if he had been killed the driver would have been arrested for murder. I have seen boys clinging to street cars, their feet dragging on the ground, and yet this company must pay damages for the recklessness of boys jumping on and off street cars.

The company employ competent and careful drivers, and look to the welfare of their patrons, and while in the discharge of their duties it is impossible to watch every boy in Wheeling, because there are scores of them. If any one will take the pains to watch the boys on the P. W. & O. R. R. Railroad, and on the street cars while in motion, and up at the turn table, they will see some one get killed for meddling with what does not concern them. As soon as there is an accident the company must pay damages. This is not written in the interest of the railroad but in justice, that the blame may be put where it belongs. This is what comes under the observation of persons every day, and yet there are juries to be found who give damages against these corporations in violation of justice or even law. Why? Because generally speaking, the parties, who get into the courts with these cases are poor and the attorney pushes it, in order to get his fee, and is case enough to let the jury that in this case, the county, State, or city will have to pay the cost, and that would not do at all. Nearly all the cases tried in this County Court are nothing but a farce.

The Stewart Hotel for Working Women.

Baltimore America.
The rules for the government of the Stewart Hotel for Working Women, which opens on April 24, have been made public, and although there are many things in them which will result in making the plan attractive and conducive to the comfort of the inmates, yet there are others again which even the observer who is not captious might legitimately criticize. Although it is evident from the prices which are to be charged for board and lodging, that the plan is not a philanthropic object in view in its establishment, yet it is difficult to understand what their intention in founding it has been. The hotel, they claim, will only be able to pay its running expenses, and the capital stock in it will therefore be dead money. We could not not have arranged matters so that those who most need an institution of this kind could have availed themselves of it? As it at present stands only women who are coming to the city for employment, and who have something to spare will become its inmates, while the wants of the great community of hard working, underpaid girls will not be alleviated in the slightest degree. Still, every one we suppose, has the right to do what he pleases, and we have nothing to say against the consideration of the abstract principles of charity and benevolence. There are, however, certain rules to which boarders will have to submit that must prove obnoxious to them, considering their sex. To use an English term applied to female domestics, "No followers will be allowed." The brilliant parlors, with their chandeliers, pianos and gorgeous upholstery, will never be decorated by the presence of the tyrant man. The doors of the hotel will be firmly closed against him, and he must content himself with standing outside, like the disconsolate Peri at the gates of Paradise, and imagining the happiness that reigns within. Another rule reads that "No dogs, cats, or birds of any kind will be admitted into the hotel." Now, it is safe to presume that amongst the inmates will be some of that class commonly known as "old maids." How will they pass the hours not devoted to gossip and scandal against their neighbors? According to this there will be no flowers, no birds, no cats, no men, and nothing which might enable the inmates to profitably employ themselves during their leisure hours. For the very character of those who will be admitted against them will have leisure. Only artists, well-paid employes in stores and warehouses, and school and music teachers can afford to purchase the benefits of the home. And even with the library, the fountains and the piano, the inmates will be debased from doing certain things, in view of proverbial female perversity, incline them towards performing them, and make their spare moments tedious and uncomfortable.

Growth of St. Louis.

St. Louis, March 27.—Gould's City Directory will be given to the public tomorrow. It will contain some interesting information never before published concerning the growth and business of St. Louis during the past year, according to the population of the city, according to the directory statistics, placed at 503,885, which, though not much of an increase, is looked on as better than a falling off. During the past year 2,116 new houses were erected, against 1,850 in 1876. When the fact that all the city was in a state of fearful paralysis, foundries closed and factories and shops running very light, is duly considered, any gain at all in the population will be solid grounds of encouragement.

WEST ALEXANDER.

Hunting for a Nephew.—A Pittsburgh Reporter offers $5 to see the Face of John Wallace.
WEST ALEXANDER, March 27.
Editors Intelligencer:
A reporter representing the Pittsburgh Leader arrived here yesterday in search of data for a sensational article in relation to the Wallace brothers. He offered one undertaker $5 to open the grave of John Wallace and allow him to look at the body, which, of course, was not accepted. The Leader man, however, would not give it up. So he hired a rig and went out to see the father (Theodore Wallace), but he would not grant a request which no man with less than the cheek of a government man would have dared to have asked. On his return, the reporter sought high and low for a picture of John Wallace, but failed to find any. He, however, got one of George. He also interviewed Squire Mayes, J. R. Bell and the correspondent of the Register in this place. The latter admitted that he sent the substance of the lengthy squib to the Register, which appeared in its issue of the 26th, and some of it not false.

Kissing the Dead Pope's Feet.

Anne Brewster's Rome Letter in Boston Advertiser.
We were taken through the antechambers and great halls, all of which were filled with a changing crowd similar to that on the staircase; then we passed on an outer gallery into the Throne hall, and from thence into a small room, where we saw the IX lying in state. He lay on a low bed, which in the center. Five priests sat on a bench at the end of the room, back of the head of the bed, reciting prayers; the guardie mobile, with their drawn swords covered with crape, stood on guard; there were four huge, lighted candles in high stands on the floor, two at the head, two at the foot of the bed. The bed was covered with red silk damask, and had a cover of the same rich stuff; on this lay the body of the pope, dressed in his usual robes of white woolen, the hands were crossed, and the face was covered with a white ermine, also bordered or lined with white ermine, and red cloth shoes on his feet. The hands were folded one over the other on the chest, and under them the crucifix his holiness held, kissed, and gave the solemn benediction with just before the dread agony of death came on. It was startling to see how life-like he looked. During the last year, or two there have been many distressing marks of old age in the pope's face, but as I saw the holy father dead last Saturday he looked as he did two years ago, when I first received his benediction. I was near enough to touch the body and to see the face plainly. There was a gentle smile on it; it seemed as if he was at the moment of awakening, and he opened his eyes and would open on us. I could only think of the just made perfect who rest in the peace of the Lord. Every one who has seen the late pope has certainly noticed the beauty of his hand—white, well formed, dignified and graceful in motion. These beautiful hands were most perfectly preserved; the sparkling oriental emeralds on the fingers, and I almost looked to see the benediction hand raised to bless us. We were only three; we knelt at the side of the bed while; then approached the feet, which were covered with red cloth shoes on his feet, and then passed out of the still room of death. A young Protestant friend who was with me pressed a bunch of bay laurel leaves which she had just gathered on the Pincio, to the pope's feet; just as I did in the West. I kissed the feet it seemed as if I were pressing my lips to Clio's leaves.

A Lady Who Keeps Lions as Pets.

Boston Herald.
Rarely does one hear of a lady's attaching herself to such strange pets as the writer saw at Mrs. Lincoln's 54 Howard street, a day or two ago. Living in the family are a couple of lions, twenty-one months old, brought up by the hand of Mrs. Lincoln. They are African lions, not the easily reared in this country, but Mrs. Lincoln has succeeded, by the exercise of great care, in rearing them to their present age and size. The male weighs about 250 pounds, and the female perhaps fifty pounds less. They have been at the house on Howard street since last September, and until within a month have had the run of the place, going about the rooms with considerable freedom. As a measure of caution the police thought the creatures should be restrained, and their quarters are now more limited than formerly, although they have a safe out-door run and a room adjoining the kitchen, with only a strong wire door separating the apartments. Mrs. Lincoln is as free with her pets as ladies are with their poodles. She plays with them, feeds them from her hands, and has taught them various tricks. They will kiss her at her bidding, jump through a hoop, &c. Before the police restrictions were placed upon them, the animals were accustomed to walk into the kitchen or parlor among guests, and go back to their quarters without offering to harm any one. A year ago the lioness used to occupy the same couch with the lady at night, but now she has grown full grown and is taken upon a cot in the bedroom. The animals are quite a curiosity, and in their gentleness, show plainly how potent is the law of kindness, even with the brute creation.

HOUSEHOLD WORDS.

The intrinsic merit of Dr. Pierce's Family Medicine have made their names household words throughout this and other countries. As the hand stretched forth in peril is rescued, it is to the saved an object of life-long gratitude, so those having been cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Medicine write of their undying thankfulness. Are you afflicted with catarrh, cold in the head, or "hay fever"? If so, try Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It is the most soothing and healing remedy known. It cures your catarrh of the nose, throat, or ears. Are you afflicted with bronchitis, consumption, scrofulous tumors, blemishes, or eruptions? If so, try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is the best tonic, alterative, and resolvent medicine known. By reason of its superior merit, it has, to a great extent, superseded the pulmonary syrups, sarsaparillas, and tonics, in the market. It will not disappoint you. Ladies suffering with diseases and weaknesses peculiar to their sex, will find prompt and positive relief by using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. No Family Medicine has attained the celebrity, and so successfully held the field, year after year, against competing manufacturers, as have Dr. Pierce's. Could any better evidence of merit be asked by the most skeptical?
